EDITOR'S PREFACE.

THIS volume of the Catalogue of the Greek Coins in the British Museum describes the Coinage of Ionia.

The size of the coins is given in inches and tenths, and the weight in English grains. Tables for converting grains into grammes and inches into millimètres, as well as into the measures of Mionnet's scale, are placed at the end of the volume. A Map has been prefixed showing in red letters the position of the cities of Ionia that issued coins.

The whole work has been written by Mr. Barclay Head, Assistant Keeper of Coins and Medals, and I have revised it by comparing the coins with the corresponding descriptions in the manuscript.

GREEK COINAGE OF IONIA.

INTRODUCTION.

§ I. EARLY ELECTRUM.

THE geographical arrangement necessarily adopted for convenience of reference in the Catalogue of Greek Coins has one disadvantage. It obliges the compiler to classify uncertain coins, on what is sometimes scanty evidence, under localities which may not have been their actual places of mintage. In the case of these doubtful specimens I have preferred to be guided by probabilities, and to hazard occasionally a more or less plausible hypothesis, rather than to omit altogether those coins, and series of coins, of which the attribution is not susceptible of positive proof.

In the present volume of the Catalogue, which comprises the coins of Ionia, we are confronted at the outset with the problem of discriminating among the ancient electrum coins those which ought to be included in Ionia from those which should be relegated to other districts.

The majority of the electrum coins (those of Cyzicus, Lampsacus, Phocaea, and Mytilene, excepted) are indeed either uncertain or only to be attributed conjecturally to this or that city or district. Granting, however, that the electrum coinage had its origin in Lydia, it is far more likely that the flourishing sea-ports of the Ionian coast were the first towns to adopt the new and convenient medium of exchange, than that it should have penetrated in the first instance in a northerly direction towards Cyzicus and the Hellespont, or in a southerly one towards Caria. This will be evident when we bear in mind that the great high-road from the interior of Asia Minor, the sole route of commerce under the Lydian Empire, ran in a westerly direction from Sardes to Smyrna, a distance of not more than sixty miles, and that the other Ionian cities, Phocaea, Ephesus, &c., were also connected both with the Lydian capital, and with one another by roads at a very early period, and long before such means of communication existed between Sardes and the more remote coasts of Troas in the north, or of Caria in the south.

M. J. P. Six, in a recent article in the Numismatic Chronicle, 1890, p. 202, has brought forward strong reasons for transferring to Sardes the series of staters, hectae, and smaller divisions impressed with the forepart of a lion, or a lion's head, which it has hitherto been usual to attribute to Miletus. The well-known type of the later coinage of Miletus is a lion looking back at the sun represented as a star (pl. xxi. 8), and it is perfectly true that these ancient electrum coins show an object resembling a star on the forehead of the lion between his eyes (cf. Num. Chron., 1887, pl. x. 12), and hence the attribution to Miletus. But as Fürtwängler has shown (Roscher, Lexicon d. griech. u. röm. Mythologie s.v. Gryps, p. 1472, sq.) the object which has been taken for a star is, in point of fact, only a lump or excrescence from which hairs sprout, giving it the appearance of a star. This knob, or excrescence, is frequently seen on archaic representations of lions' and griffins' heads. Its purpose appears to have been simply to give them an aspect of greater ferocity.

M. Six, having thus deprived Miletus of the series in question, proceeds to attribute them to Sardes on the strength of the curious inscription ΙΣΑΛΛΑ which is more or less legible on certain specimens, and which he proposes to read Φαλφεῖ[ατες], probably the Lydian form (with digammas) of the name of King Alyattes.

Whether M. Six's ingenious suggestion will be accepted by Philologists I cannot say, but in any case, there being no longer any reason to attribute the coins to Miletus, Sardes seems to have the best claim to them, as they fill a period in the numismatic history of Lydia before the reign of Croesus, which was previously almost a blank, and during which it is presumable that the Lydian electrum was the only medium of circulation throughout western Asia Minor. This series has therefore been transferred to Lydia, and will be catalogued in a future volume.

The electrum coins which (on M. Six's suggestion) have been assigned in the present volume to Miletus are, with a single exception (pl. iii. 3), only those on which the lion's head is turned back as on the later coins of the city (cf. pl. iii. 4-7, and pls. xxi.-xxii.). The attribution to Miletus of these coins is of course by no means absolutely certain, and Lenormant (Monnaies royales de la Lydie, p. 13) has adduced arguments of some weight in favour of classing them to Sardes, the chief of which is that the fox which appears in the central incuse on pl. iii. nos. 3 (?), 5, and 6, is a distinctive Lydian symbol emblematical of the Lydian god Bassareus, whose name is derived from Βασσάρα, a fox (Tzetz. in Lyc. 771, cf. Βασσάριον, Herod. iv. 192). It is noteworthy, however, that the lion with reverted head is the principal type, and points to Miletus, and that the fox only occupies a subordinate position in one of the incuse depressions of the reverse, the two others containing respectively a stag's head and a cruciform star with pellets at its centre and extremities. These subordinate reverse-types, or symbols, may therefore merely serve to show that the coins of Miletus were accepted also in the neighbouring territories of Ephesus (symbol, stag's head), Sardes (symbol, fox), and a third city, perhaps Erythrae (symbol, ☿).

The only specimen without the lion which has been included among the coins of Miletus is figured on pl. iii. 3. The attribution rests on the ground of the general resemblance of the reverse to those of nos. 5 and 6 of the same plate. For the rest, this particular specimen might equally well be attributed to Sardes. From its specific gravity, which is only 10.58,* it seems to consist almost entirely of silver, the proportions being, silver 98 per cent., gold 2 per cent., but from its yellow tint as compared with pure silver it is possible that it may contain a larger proportion of gold than is indicated by its specific gravity, the above calculation of the gold percentage being based upon the assumption that the coin consists of gold and silver only.

The weight of the coin, 166.87 grs., is that of the Lydian silver staters of the age of Croesus.

To Ephesus I propose to attribute the early electrum coins bearing the types of the stag or the bee, the well-known symbols of the Ephesian Artemis. The unique and remarkable stater (pl. iii. 8) with the inscription ΦΑΝΟΣ ΕΜΙ ΣΗΜΑ (retrograde, in archaic Ionian characters) above the back of the stag has been so often discussed (see Hist. Num., p. 526) that I need only repeat here that Prof. Gardner's attribution of the coin to Phanes of Halicarnassus, circ. B.C. 525, seems to me to be unsatisfactory. The stater has all the appearance of being considerably earlier than the time of this Phanes, and the type is so distinctly Ephesian that I have little hesitation in assigning it to an earlier Phanes of Ephesus. Sir Charles Newton's suggestion that ΦΑΝΟΣ or, as he reads it, ΦΑΕΝΟΡ, is equivalent to φαένως, a genitive of φαεῖν, which he takes to be an epithet of Artemis meaning "the bright one," the translation of the legend being, according

* The specific gravity of pure silver is 10.48, that of pure gold is 19.28. The S. G. of Electrum ranges between these two.

to him, "I am the coin of the bright one" (Num. Chron., 1870, p. 238), seems less probable than the simpler explanation of Φαῖος as a genitive of Φάων, the name of some dynast or tyrant of Ephesus unrecorded in history. I prefer therefore the translation "I am the signet (or coin) of Phanes."

The next two coins with the bee (pl. iii. 9, 10) are certainly Ephesian. They are remarkable for the small percentage of gold which, judging from their specific gravities, they seem to contain, viz. 14 per cent. and 5 per cent. respectively.

The series which follows next on pl. iii., nos. 12-16, is attributed Erythrae? conjecturally to Erythrae, nos. 12-14, on account of Electrum. the star-like flower which is the reverse-type of the Erythraean silver coins of the earliest period (cf. pl. xv. nos. 2-7). The hekte with the head of Herakles (pl. iii. 15) is attributed by M. Six to Heraclea in Bithynia (cf. B. M. Cat. Pontus, p. xi.); but Erythrae would appear to be a more probable place of mintage, situated as it was in the very heart of the region where electrum formed the staple of the currency, while Heraclea, far away to the north, on the coast of the Black Sea, is not known to have issued any coins before the close of the fifth century. The head of Herakles as a coin-type is equally appropriate to both towns.

The $\frac{1}{4}$ th stater (pl. iii. 16) may be compared with the early silver coins bearing a horseman on the obverse (pl. xv. 1), which are also probably of Erythraean origin.

Of the two electrum coins which are assigned to Clazomenae (?)
 Clazomenae. the first (pl. iii. 17), a hekte with a boar's head, is Electrum. one of the few electrum coins which are furnished with an inscription. Unfortunately, the letters in front of the head are not legible. M. Six's suggestion that they may be the first three letters of the name of King Sadyattes of Lydia seems improbable. The attribution to Clazomenae rests, however, rather upon the type than the inscription.

The stater with the forepart of a winged boar (pl. iii. 18) is of a later date than the preceding. In type it resembles very closely the earliest silver coins of Clazomenae (pl. vi. 1).

The electrum stater, pl. iii. 19, certainly belongs to Chios, while Chios, Samos. pl. iii. 24 is probably of Samos, but whether the Electrum. coins figured on pl. iii. 20-23 are Samian is very doubtful.

Another conjectural attribution which I have ventured to suggest is that of the stater and hecte with rude archaic Old Smyrna. lions' heads (pl. iii. 1-2) and of Phocaïc weight, to Smyrna before the destruction of that city by Alyattes of Lydia, circ. B.C. 585,* for, as Prof. Ramsay has pointed out (Hist. Geog. of Asia Minor, p. 61), "the geographical situation of Smyrna must have given it a decisive advantage in the competition for the trade of the Hermos valley, but it developed such a strong Greek spirit, and it was so dangerously close to the Lydian capital, that it was destroyed as a rival to Sardis by the rising military power of Lydia." The fact that the lion's head stater is of Phocaïc weight (248 grs.) is to my mind strong evidence that it belongs to the northern part of Ionia, for, as I have elsewhere shown (Num. Chron., 1875, p. 288), the Phocaïc standard prevailed from Smyrna northwards to the shores of the Propontis, while on the other hand the Phoenician standard, with its stater of 220 grs., was in use at Sardes, Ephesus, Miletus, and generally in the southern half of Ionia.

After the destruction of Smyrna by the Lydians the influence of Phocaea. Elec- Phocaea seems to have rapidly increased, and it trum. was through this port that the products of the interior now found their way across the sea. The extension of the Phocaïc standard coincides (in so far as we are able to judge from the coins), with the period during which Phocaea enjoyed a maritime supremacy (circ. B.C. 602-560*). The impetus given at this time to the coinage of Phocaea was doubtless also due in great part to the troubles of Miletus, and to the consequent cessation of the issue of electrum staters at that city during the Milesian war B.C. 623-612.

* In my Hist. Num., p. 506, I suggested Mytilene as the place of mintage of these coins. It now seems to me that Smyrna has a stronger claim.

The staters of the Phocaic standard are distinguishable from the Milesian not only by their heavier weight, 256-248 grs. as against the Sardinian and Milesian, weighing only 219-215 grs., but by their darker colour, which is due to their containing a considerably higher percentage of pure gold.†

To the town of Phocaea itself there is at present only one stater which can be certainly attributed. It has on the obverse a seal, the type parlant of the city, together with the letter Θ (= Φ) beneath it (Num. Chron., 1875, pl. x. 6), but five other specimens are extant of other types (Hist. Num., p. 506), among which the most remarkable is the stater with a griffin's head accompanied by an inscription apparently $\Sigma\Theta\text{OM}$, which has not been explained. The type is appropriate either to Phocaea or Teos.

From this time forward no electrum staters of Phocaea are known. The Persian conquest, and the emigration of the greater part of the population of Phocaea (B.C. 544), are sufficient to account for the cessation of the coinage, and when it recommences, probably quite late in the sixth century, it seems (if we may judge from the extant coins), to have consisted only of hectae and smaller divisions. These are very abundant and exhibit a great variety of types ranging from the archaic to the finest style of art. In every case the main type is accompanied by the symbol of Phocaea, the seal (see pls. iv. and v.).

* Goodwin, De potentiae veterum gentium maritimae epochis apud Eusebium, Göttingen, 1885.

† Head (B. V.), "Electrum coins and their specific gravity," Num. Chron. 1887, p. 304 sqq.

Electrum hectae, as issued from the mints of Phocaea and Mytilene, constituted the chief currency of the coasts of western Asia Minor during the whole of the fifth and a great part of the fourth century B.C., and these two cities, in order to secure an absolute uniformity in the fineness of the coinage, entered into a monetary convention about the close of the fifth century, the text of which was discovered and published by Sir Charles Newton in the Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature, vol. viii., p. 549.* In this decree it was stipulated that the two cities should strike coins of identical weight and fineness, each minting in turn for the space of one year, it being decided by lot that Mytilene should begin. Nothing is said in the inscription concerning the denominations of the coins, which are simply called τὸ χρυσίον, but there can be little doubt that staters, as well as hectae, were struck at both towns. Of Mytilene, indeed, the British Museum has recently acquired a stater at present unique (Num. Chron., 1890, pl. xix. 16), which clearly belongs to the end of the fifth or the beginning of the fourth century, and it is probable that specimens of the contemporary Phocaeian stater will some day be discovered, for we know that these coins circulated in large quantities throughout Greece, cf. Thuc. iv. 52, δισχιλίου σιατῆρας Φωκαίτας, and Demosth. xl. 36, τριακοσίου σιατῆρας Φωκαεῖς. Staters and hectae of Phocaea are also mentioned in several Attic inscriptions dating from B.C. 429 and 397 (Hist. Num., p. 507).

The electrum coins arranged on plates iii.-v. thus comprise all such coins in the National Collection as we are able to attribute with reasonable probability to Ionian cities. In the text of the catalogue they are described under the several towns to which they presumably belong. There remain, however, a large number of electrum coins which it would be hazardous to attribute, but which are, nevertheless, probably in the main Ionian. The chief of these I have arranged according to the standards which they follow, pp. 1-15 (Phoenician, Phocaïc, Euboïc, &c.), and on plates i. and ii. Among them a few coins will be found which are also repeated on plate iii. under their town headings.

The normal standards of weight are approximately as follows Standards of (though here and there a few of the smaller divisions

Wherever I have been able to suggest a place of mintage I have done so after the descriptions of the specimens in the text. These attributions are, however, merely put forward as hints, for in some cases the provenance of the coin renders the suggested attribution somewhat improbable. In view of this uncertainty, I have held it more convenient to describe the doubtful specimens together under Ionia, in preference to distributing them among the various localities, some in Ionia and some in other districts, to which they may severally belong. The descriptions of such specimens as seem to admit of a more exact attribution will, however, be repeated, both in this and subsequent volumes of the catalogue, under the headings of the towns to which they may be conjecturally ascribed.

Enough has been said to make it evident that in the present state of our knowledge no more exact classification than the one now adopted can be safely attempted. Future discoveries may, perhaps, throw more light upon this obscure page of numismatic history.

There is, however, one interesting series (pp. 7, 8) which calls for a few remarks. The coins of this class are of pale-coloured electrum, though not of the earliest style. They are figured on pl. i., nos. 19-26.

Uncertain Electrum Staters of the 'Phoenician' standard.

With regard to these staters I have elsewhere said (Num. Chron., 1887, p. 281) that "it may be questioned whether the types are those of cities at all. The great similarity of the style and fabric of these coins suggests the possibility of their having all been struck at one mint which, like Cyzicus, may have adopted a fresh type for each new issue." M. J. P. Six (Num. Chron., 1890, p. 219) not only agrees with this suggestion, but proceeds to argue that Chios was the place of mintage of the whole series, and that these electrum staters are the Chian pentadrachms mentioned by Xenophon (Hellen i., 6, 12). His reasons for this identification are first that the Sphinx is the commonest type, and, secondly, that in weight (circ. 220 grs.) they correspond to five Corinthian silver drachms of about 44 grs. It seems, however, to me in the highest degree unlikely that a coincidence of weight between coins of different metals could have given rise to such a name as 'Pentadrachm.' Surely this name must imply that the coin so-called passed current for five drachms, not that it happened to be equivalent in weight to five drachms of a different metal. These electrum staters, as M. Six himself acknowledges, were worth in silver about 20 Attic or 30 Corinthian drachms,* and the mere fact that they correspond in weight to five of the latter could hardly have been the occasion of a name which would have been quite misleading.

Although, therefore, some of them (those with the sphinx) are certainly Chian coins, and although it is possible that all of them may have been struck at Chios, they cannot be the Chian pentadrachms alluded to by Xenophon as current in B.C. 406. The Chian pentadrachm must have been either an electrum hekte (worth 5 Attic drachms, see infra p. xxx), or, like the Macedonian pentadrachm, a silver coin.

The series of electrum staters now under consideration probably began to be struck before B.C. 500, and may possibly cover a period of nearly half a century, for slight differences, both of style and fabric, are observable. Until, therefore, it can be clearly demonstrated that they were struck at a single mint, it will be safer to treat them as a continuation, after a break, of the earlier coinage on the same standard as issued at Sardes, Miletus, Ephesus, and other towns. Their undoubted similarity in style to one another may be accounted for on the supposition that they are the coinage of a monetary convention of the same kind as that which, at a later period, was concluded between Phocaea and Mytilene.

In my two papers in the Numismatic Chronicle, "Metrological Proportionate Notes on Ancient Electrum Coins," 1875, and values of Elec- "Electrum Coins and their Specific Gravity," trum and Silver. 1887, and in the introduction to the Historia Numorum, the origin and extension of the various systems of weight have already been discussed.

In view of the very considerable discrepancies in the percentage of gold contained in electrum staters of approximately the same weight and colour, it is evident that no exact inferences can safely be drawn with regard to the proportionate values of electrum and silver. If any fixed relations between the two metals existed in the earlier period they must have been merely conventional. It seems, nevertheless, probable that some such relations did prevail, and it may be assumed from the darker hue of some of the archaic staters of the Phocaic standard (pl. ii. 1-3), which in weight approach the standard in use for pure gold* that they were intended to circulate as gold, while the paler coloured electrum staters of the Phoenician and of the later Phocaic (Cyzicene) standards (the former of which in weight are about the same as the Phoenician silver staters, circ. 220 grs.) were accepted at a much lower rate of exchange, though what this may have been is doubtful, for it seems clear that the exact percentage of gold contained in the coins cannot have been taken into consideration.

Thus, for instance, I find that the pure gold coins of Croesus and the Darics of 130 grs. were equivalent to 1729 grs. of silver, assuming 13·3 : 1 as the proportionate value of gold to silver in Asia at the time when these coins were struck.

Judging by their specific gravity (given in the text), and the gold percentage deduced therefrom, the following would be the values in silver of electrum staters of Phoenician weight:—

	Weight.	Av per cent.	Value in grs. \mathcal{A} .	Attribution.
Pl. i. 1	219·5 grs.	51	1596·4	Uncertain, p. 1.
Pl. iii. 4	215·4 „	40	1275·1	Miletus, p. 183.
Pl. iii. 5	215·0 „	38	1219·9	Miletus, p. 183.
Pl. iii. 8	216·5 „	36	1175·1	Ephesus, p. 47.
Pl. i. 26	215·17 „	20	744·4	Cyme (?) p. 8.

and the following of some staters of Phocaic weight:—

Pl. iii. 1	248·27 grs.	59	2049·9	Old Smyrna (?) p. 236.
Pl. ii. 3	252·5 „	64	2240·1	Thasos (?) p. 9.
Cat. Mysia , }	248·7 „	51	1808·7	{ Cyzicus (Cat. Mys.
Pl. iv. 11 }				{ p. 22, No. 28.

Here then we have two staters differing but slightly in weight and colour. One of them (pl. i. 1) weighs 219·5 grs., and is worth 1596 grs. of silver, the other (pl. i. 26) weighs 215·17 grs., and is worth only 744 grs. of silver, or less than half the value of the first.

* The early Phocaic stater weighs 255 grs., which is very little, if at all, below the actual weight of two gold Darics. The normal weight of the 60th part of the heavy Assyrian mina in gold was 260 grs.

Such figures as these seem to be fatal to the theory that the Greeks of Asia Minor had any exact knowledge of the value in silver of the electrum currency, and it is equally hard to believe that coins of pale colour, in some cases almost approaching that of silver, could have passed current as gold. We are therefore thrown back upon the hypothesis that a purely conventional proportion, possibly 8 : 1, or in some cases even 10 : 1, may have prevailed between the Ionian pale electrum and silver, and that only a few of the darkest coloured electrum coins passed, when first issued in the sixth century B.C., for pure gold at the accepted rate of 13·3 : 1.

It is true that the suggested proportion of 8 : 1 is in excess of the values given above as estimated by specific gravity. But it must be borne in mind that the specific gravity of electrum coins does not afford an exact indication of the percentages of gold and silver if there is any trace of a third metal in the composition (and generally speaking it may be assumed that such is the case), and that the actual gold percentage is consequently in excess of the amount indicated, for a small percentage of copper alloy would have the effect of lowering the specific gravity. The following example may serve to make this clearer. The specific gravity of a Cyzicene stater in the British Museum (Cat. Mysia, p. 22, No. 28) weighing 248·7 grs. is 13·657. This coin, theoretically, should therefore contain 51 per cent. of pure gold and 49 per cent. of silver (see Table in Num. Chron., 1887, p. 308), and accordingly its value in silver should be 1808·70 grs. As a matter of fact, however, this is not the case, for it has been carefully analysed by Mr. G. T. Prior, of the Department of Mineralogy in the British Museum, and he finds that the percentage composition as deduced from an analysis of about 10 grs. scraped from its edge is—

Gold	57.9
Silver	39.0
Copper	3.1

The coin must therefore have been actually worth (if we neglect the small percentage of copper) as much as 2019 grs. of silver (= 30 Attic drachms), that is to say, 211 grs. more than the amount indicated by its specific gravity. This analysis is important, as it refutes Prof. Gardner's theory, based as it is, merely upon the specific gravity of a few specimens, that the Cyzicene stater was practically equivalent to the Daric (Num. Chron., 1887, p. 189), for this Cyzicene stands to the Daric in the proportion of 2019:1729, and was consequently worth 290 grs., or nearly $4\frac{1}{2}$ Attic drachms more than the Daric.*

Supposing that the early electrum coins cited above also contain a percentage of copper like the Cyzicene which has been analysed, the gold contents of all the specimens may be raised by from 5 to 10 per cent., and the valuations in silver as given above may be proportionately increased.

Now if we apply this calculation to the pale electrum coin of the Milesian standard figured on pl. i. 1, weighing 219.5 grs., we shall find that instead of containing only 51 per cent. of pure gold it would probably contain not less than 56 per cent., and that its value in silver instead of 1596.4 grs. must be raised to 1731.4 grs., which is practically equivalent to the gold Daric of which the value in silver is 1729 grs.

Silver values of Electrum stater
of 220 grs.

The equivalents in current silver coins of this electrum stater of the Phoenician standard may therefore have been approximately as follows:—

* In the time of Demosthenes (c. Phorm., 34, 23) the value of the Cyzicene staters (still current in large numbers though their issue had come to an end) had fallen to 28 Attic drachms, or about 1890 grs. of silver. This depreciation may have been due partly to wear and tear, and partly to a fall in the value of gold owing to the quantity of that metal put into circulation by Philip of Macedon.

It is true that the above equivalents are based upon the exact analysis of a single specimen, and it is also indisputable that the specific gravities point to great divergencies in the gold contents of numerous specimens which are otherwise identical both in weight and colour. It seems, nevertheless, certain that however widely individual specimens may have differed in metal value from one another, no such differences can have been recognized in practice or in the popular estimate of the exchange values, although the current values both of the Milesian and of the Cyzicene stater may have varied from time to time, and may indeed have been higher in some districts and lower in others.

For a time these two rival coinages circulated side by side, but little by little the Cyzicene mint seems to have acquired the ascendancy; for the electrum staters of the Phoenician standard (220-215 grs.) ceased to be issued probably soon after B.C. 500, while Cyzicus on the other hand continued to strike staters of 248 grs. down to about B.C. 350 (B.M. Cat. Mysia, Introd. p. xvii).

The only rivals of Cyzicus in the fifth and fourth centuries were Phocaea, of which staters are mentioned in inscriptions, and of which hectae (39.4 grs.) are still extant in considerable numbers—Mytilene, of which one stater (238.4 grs.) and numerous hectae are known (see supra, p. xxii), Lampsacus, of which staters exist weighing 237 grs., and lastly Chios, of which a stater is published of the Cyzicene standard (Rev. Num., 1864, pl. i. 4).

Whether the staters of 238 grs. are composed of the same alloy as the Cyzicenes has not been ascertained, but supposing them also to contain not less than 56 per cent. of pure gold their value in silver would have been about 1877 grs.

Of the towns mentioned above, Chios was the only one which gave up the Phoenician stater of 220 grs. for the Cyzicene stater of 248 grs. Judging by style, the Chian stater of Cyzicene weight belongs to the close of the fifth century B.C., and if, like Cyzicus, Chios also struck hectae at the same time, these latter may have been the Chian pentadrachms mentioned by Xenophon, for the hecte would have been worth just five Attic drachms.

Among the coins of the Euboic standard figured on pl. ii., No. 14 Early Euboic is the earliest representation of the Gorgoneion Electrum. which occurs on Greek coins. It has been attributed by me to Eretria in Euboea (Num. Chron., 1887, p. 287), but as M. Waddington informs me that he has a specimen which was found in the Dardanelles, and as M. Six has a hekte of the same type found in the island of Imbros, it is more probable that the electrum coins of this type belong to Parium (on the silver coins of which city the Gorgon-head also occurs) rather than to Eretria. The weight of this coin is 123.46 grs., and the percentage of pure gold calculated from its specific gravity is 30%. Allowing for the presence of a small percentage of copper, we might even be warranted in fixing the actual gold contents of the piece as high as 40 per cent. The value in silver of this coin would in that case stand at about 730 grs., or 12 Euboic drachms of about 61 grs.

On the other hand, a coin of the same (Euboic) standard though of almost full weight, 133.34 grs., and of a better quality of metal than the preceding, and containing, according to its specific gravity, 48 per cent, and therefore, possibly, in reality as much as 58 per cent. of pure gold, would be worth about 1084 grs. of silver, or 16 Euboic drachms of full weight (67.5 grs.), or 20 Phœnician drachms of 54 grs. This coin is conjecturally attributed to Samos (pl. iii. 20).

Of the smaller Euboic divisions (pl. ii. 15-29) there are very few, if any, which afford any reliable clue to their places of mintage. As, however, they come almost all from Asia Minor, it is doubtful whether the attribution to Chalcis in Euboea of the specimens with the eagle and wheel types which I hazarded in the catalogue of the coins of Central Greece, p. 106, and Introd. p. lii., is well founded.

§ II. EARLY SILVER COINAGE.

It has been usual to assert that the earliest silver coins struck in Asia Minor are the silver staters (168 grs.), $\frac{1}{2}$ staters (84 grs.), $\frac{1}{3}$ staters (56 grs.), and $\frac{1}{12}$ staters (14 grs.), with the foreparts of a lion and bull face to face, attributed to the time of Croesus of Lydia, B.C. 568-554. (Hist. Num., p. 546.)

The passage of Herodotus (i. 94) Λυδοὶ πρῶτοι ἀνθρώπων τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν νόμισμα χρυσοῦ καὶ ἀργύρου κοφάμενοι ἐχρήσαντο, has frequently been cited in support of this theory; and yet, as M. Six has justly remarked (Num. Chron., 1890, p. 210), all that Herodotus means to say is that the Lydians were the first people who, so far as he knew, made use of both gold and silver money at the same time. From this it by no means follows that silver had not been struck either apart from gold or concurrently with electrum at an earlier period or elsewhere than in Lydia.

In point of fact there are silver coins which seem to be more archaic in style than the silver coins of Croesus, or even than the Lydian electrum coins of some of his predecessors. These primitive silver coins are of two standards, the staters of which weigh respectively 227-211 grs. (Phoenician standard), and 196-180 grs. (Aeginetic standard). Most of the specimens of this ancient silver currency come from two hoards, one of which was found at Santorin (Thera) in 1821, and has been described by Mr. Wroth (Num. Chron., 1884, p. 269), while the other is believed to have been found in Egypt, and is described by Canon Greenwell (Num. Chron., 1890, p. 13). Two other smaller hoards, found respectively at Melos (Num. Chron. vi., p. 134) and at Myt-Rahineh in Egypt (Rev. Num., 1861, p. 414), also contained coins of the same class.

The great majority of the specimens in these hoards belong to Aegina and the Aegean islands, viz., Delos (?) (two dolphins, N. C., 1884, pl. xii. 12), Carteia in Ceos, (amphora, l. c. fig. 14), Siphnos (dove, l. c., fig. 8), Naxos (?) (kantharos, l. c., fig. 7), and Paros (goat and dolphin, l. c., fig. 13). The remaining types are more difficult to attribute if we confine our attention to the Cyclades, but if we extend our field of choice so as to include the islands and coasts of western Asia Minor, we may assign the coin with the sphinx (Num. Chron., 1890, pl. ii. 15) to Chios; the one with the crab (l. c., fig. 16) to Cos; those with the lion's head (l. c., fig. 14) and with the forepart of a lion looking back (pl. xxi. 1, 2 of this Catalogue) to Miletus; those with the forepart of a horse (Num. Chron., 1884, pl. xii. 1, 2), to Cyme; the one with the cock (of which the only specimen I know of is in Mr. Montagu's collection, Num. Chron., 1892, pl. iii. 1), to Dardanus; and those with the head and tail of a tunny fish (Num. Chron., 1884, pl. xii. 6), 227 grs. to Cyzicus. The boar's head, 223 grs. (Num. Chron., 1884, pl. xii. 9) might belong to Methymna, and another with a ram's head, in the British Museum, weighing 217 grs., might be ascribed to Cebrenia or possibly Clazomenae. Out of the whole number there remains only one type, head of Silenus, 211 grs. (Num. Chron., 1884, pl. xii. 17), for which I am at present unable to suggest a place of mintage.

With the exception of Chios and Cos (types, sphinx and crab), all the above Asiatic attributions are more or less open to doubt, but it seems certain that this seventh century silver currency must have been common to the western coasts of Asia Minor, as well as to the Cyclades and Aegina. It seems also probable that the specimens of the heavier weight, 227-211 grs., are the earliest, and that under the predominant influence of the coinage of Aegina the weight in many places sank to 196-180 grs. This Aeginetic standard even made its way across the sea to Chios (sphinx, 188 grs.), Cos (crab, 190-187 grs.), Miletus (lion's head, 190-187 grs., and forepart of lion, sometimes with star on reverse, 185.5-180.8 grs.), Cyme (forepart of horse, Rev. star, 184 grs.). The only Ionian city, however, in which the Aeginetic standard continued to prevail after the Persian conquest, and even down to the beginning of the fourth century, was Teos. Nearly all the other Asiatic coast towns reverted to the older Phoenician standard, the stater of which had, however, sunk, in some places, to about 216-205 grs., the didrachm to 108-100 and the drachm to somewhat over 50 grs. (e.g. Phocaea, Clazomenae, Erythrae, Ephesus, and Samos).

The absence of inscriptions on nearly all coins of the highest antiquity makes it naturally very difficult to speak with absolute confidence with regard to their origin, and even where inscriptions do occur they do not always make our task much easier. For instance, on some of the coins which I propose to assign to Miletus (pl. xxi., no 1), we may read the letters OVA. This inscription is generally read retrograde from the outside as VAO (ΟΛΥ), and M. Six, who adopts this reading (Num. Chron., 1890, p. 223), has suggested as their probable place of mintage the town of Olymus in Caria, about 10 miles inland, and known to us only from a few first century inscriptions (Judeich, Mittheilungen Inst. Athen. xiv. 1889, p. 367, sqq.). Whether the legend is OVA or VAO (= ΟΛΥ) depends upon whether it be read from the inside or the outside, but it should be noted that the latter position is extremely rare on archaic coins. The chief objection to M. Six's proposal lies, however, in the fact that the coinage in these times was, with a very few exceptions, restricted to the more important towns on the sea-coast. Sardes, the Lydian capital, is the chief exception to this rule. It is, indeed, hardly conceivable that inland places, such as Mylasa (to which M. Six attributes the staters with the forepart of a horse which I would ascribe to Cyme), and Olymus (to which he gives those with the forepart of a lion) should have been issuing large silver coins at the very time when wealthy commercial seaports like Miletus were, according to this hypothesis, without a silver currency, or only striking small denominations in that metal.

The attribution to Miletus on the other hand rests not only upon the intrinsic probability of that city having been one of the first on the Ionian sea-board to issue silver coins but upon the types of the coins in question, on the obverse the forepart of a lion with his head turned back, and on the reverse a star (pl. xxi. 2). If we compare these types with those of the small silver coins of the fifth century (pl. xxi. 4), the attribution of which to Miletus is not disputed, we shall see that they are almost identical, and had it not been for the letters OVA on some specimens I imagine that no one would have doubted their Milesian origin.

In explanation of the legend I would venture to suggest that OVA may not be the name of a locality but that of a dynast or ruler of Miletus unknown to history. (Cf. the name of Phanes on the electrum stater of Ephesus (pl. iii. 8). There is one name especially which seems to me by no means improbable, this is Οὐλιάδης, a well-known Ionic name (see Plut. Arist. xxiii. 6, and Boeckh, C. I. G., passim), derived from Ὀῦλιος (the Healer), a surname of Apollo, both at Miletus and Delos. (Cf. Strab. xiv. 635, Ὀῦλιον δ' Ἀπόλλωνα καλοῦσιν ἅπαντες καὶ Μιλήσιοι καὶ Δῆλιοι, οἷον ὑγιαστικὸν καὶ παιωνικὸν τὸ γὰρ οὔλειν ὑγιαίνειν).

To Miletus have also been attributed some coins inscribed EKA and MA, which clearly belong to the early part of the fourth century B.C. (pl. xxi. 5, 6). These specimens bear Milesian types rudely executed and sometimes misunderstood. Although it has been usual to assign them to the city of Miletus under the Carian dynasts Hekatomnus and Mausolus (Head, Hist. Num., p. 503) it should be remarked that Hekatomnus never appears to have been master of Miletus, and although Mausolus captured the neighbouring town of Heraclea and made one or two unsuccessful attempts upon Miletus, there is no evidence that he ever actually ruled over that city. If, therefore, the letters EKA and MA stand, as seems highly probable, for Ἐκατόμνως and Μαύσσωνος, we must suppose with M. Six (Num. Chron., 1890, p. 231) that the coins in question are merely imitations of the Milesian coinage struck by the Carian dynasts outside the territory of Miletus.

In addition to the staters, from the Santorin and other finds, of the Phoenician and Aeginetic standards, there are Early silver coins of doubtful attribution. numerous uninscribed coins of distinctly later date than these, the attributions of which, owing to their lack of inscriptions, are sometimes open to doubt. When the types are quite distinctive, as are the seal, the sphinx, the bee (Phocaea, Chios, Ephesus), no difficulties arise, but there are other types which are equally appropriate to two or more cities. Among these are the griffin (pl. xxiii. 3) and the griffin's head (pl. xxiii. 4, 5), which I have assigned to Phocaea, but which may belong to Teos; the horseman (pl. xv. 1), assigned to Erythrae, but which might also be ascribed to Colophon; and the forepart of a bull (pl. xxxiv. 3, 6) and the lion's head (not scalp) facing (pl. xxxiv. 4), which are doubtfully attributed to Samos, though their Euboic weight, and something perhaps in their style, seems to point rather to Lycia.

§ III. CHRONOLOGY AND METROLOGY.

THE Ionian coastland from Phocaea in the north to Miletus in the south, together with its adjacent islands Chios and Samos, presents to our view within its narrow limits a chain of maritime towns, about a dozen in number, no one of which was distant from its nearest neighbour by more than about twenty miles in a direct line. These twelve towns were, from the time of their foundation in the eleventh century B.C., connected together in a loose sort of confederacy, δωδεκάπολις, which, however, appears to have been limited to religious and agonistic purposes, for each city was politically an independent republic. This fact, together with the difficulty of intercommunication, at least by land, must account for the want of uniformity which, down to the defeat of Antiochus by the Romans B.C. 190, prevails in the coinage.

In no other region of the Greek world do we find within so small a compass such a chaotic mingling of weight-standards as we meet with in Ionia. In the earliest period this discrepancy is less evident than it afterwards becomes, but this is probably only owing to the fact that the coinages were less numerous, for even among the early electrum coins, as we have already seen, one standard prevailed at Phocaea and another at Miletus.*

The following are the standards used for silver coins in Silver standards. Ionia :—

- I. The Aeginetic, derived from European Greece or the Cyclades. Stater about 185 grs. prevailed in the sixth century at Chios and Miletus and at Teos down to the beginning of the fourth century.
- II. The Phoenician, probably introduced in prehistoric times by the Phoenician traders before the invention of coining. The earliest form of this standard as used both for electrum and silver coins yields a stater or tetradrachm of about 220 grs. normal (actual maximum weight, 218 grs.).

* Prof. W. Ridgeway in his valuable and suggestive work "Origin of Currency and Weight Standards," Cambridge, 1892, published too late for me to refer to it in the text, is of opinion that the frequent changes in the weights of the silver coins are solely due to frequent and very considerable fluctuations in the relation of silver to gold. He contends that while the gold unit remained for ages fixed at 130 grs., "the various Greek Communities were engaged in an endless quest after bi-metallism" with the inevitable result that the weights of the silver staters were continually being raised or lowered in order that a definite round number of silver units might exchange for the fixed gold unit. This explanation, however, fails to account for the fact that towns separated from one another by only a few miles, and in constant communication with one another struck their silver coins simultaneously on different standards; for it is inconceivable that silver could stand to gold in an entirely different relation at one and the same time on the markets of two neighbouring towns.

- III. The Chian or Rhodian variety of the Phoenician standard (tetradrachm 245-236 grs.). Whether the coins of this weight are Phoenician raised, or Euboic-Attic debased, is doubtful.
- IV. The Samian is a debased form of the Phoenician. The tetradrachm does not exceed 205 grs.
- V. The Euboic-Attic standard (didrachm or stater 135 grs.) occurs before the age of Alexander, but for a time only, at Clazomenae, Magnesia, Samos and Miletus. After the victory of the Romans at the battle of Magnesia the Attic weight became general.
- VI. The Persic, derived from the Persian siglos of 84 grs., prevailed in the fifth century at Erythrae and Colophon, and in the third century at Miletus only.
- VII. The Cistophoric standard (tetradrachm 196 grs.) which was introduced circ. B.C. 202 at Ephesus was used for the quasi-federal currency of the Cistophori throughout the greater part of western Asia Minor. In Ionia, in addition to Cistophori of the ordinary type struck at Ephesus and Smyrna, a few coins of other types issued apparently on the Cistophoric standard occur at Samos and Miletus.

The following is a résumé of the principal issues of the various Ionian towns arranged in successive chronological periods :—

Chronological Synopsis.

From the eleventh to the seventh century B.C. there is no coinage whatever in Ionia, notwithstanding the fact that during all these years the Greek cities of Ionia enjoyed complete independence and attained to considerable wealth and prosperity. About the end of the eighth or the beginning of the seventh century the Lydians introduced the art of coining.

The silver coins which I propose to attribute to Miletus in this period are, like those of Chios and Teos, of Aeginetic weight (see Num. Chron., 1890, pl. ii. 14 and pl. xxi. 1, 2 of the present work).

Persian dominion under Cyrus, Cambyeses, and Darius I, from Period III. B.C. 545 to the Ionian revolt and the sack of B.C. 545-494. Miletus, B.C. 494.

This period is characterized by a very marked diminution in the coinage of the Ionian cities.

The following are the chief, if not the only places of mintage:—

It is doubtful whether all these silver coins were struck at Samos, for it is probable that on the capture of the island by the Persians B.C. 520, the coinage came, for a time, to an end.

From the suppression of the Ionian revolt and the sack of Miletus, Period IV. B.C. 494, to the battle of Eurymedon, B.C. 469, and

* Leuce was founded by Tachos, a commander of the Persian fleet, in revolt against Artaxerxes Mnemon, circ. B.C. 383. It stood on a promontory overlooking the sea where was a sanctuary of Apollo. For some time after the death of Tachos (B.C. 382), the possession of the place was a subject of dispute between the Cymaeans on the north and the Clazomenians on the south. The matter was referred to the oracle of Delphi and the Pythia replied that Leuce should belong to that city which should first offer sacrifice there to Apollo. The Clazomenians by a stratagem succeeded in anticipating the Cymaeans and thus obtained possession of the town (Diod. xv. 18). The Clazomenian types of the coins of Leuce confirm the statement of Diodorus.

This period, beginning with the battle of Ipsus and the victory of Seleucus and Lysimachus over Antigonus and Demetrius, is characterized by a general though not an universal cessation of autonomous silver coinages in Ionia. These currencies were to some extent replaced by the issue after B.C. 195 of Attic tetradrachms by Lysimachus at Smyrna, Erythrae, Ephesus, and Magnesia. Ephesus, under the temporary name of Arsinoë, the wife of Lysimachus, also struck Attic octobols 82.1 grs. (pl. x. 5) and bronze coins, B.C. 288-280. It appears also to have struck bronze coins under the name of Eurydicea, out of compliment to Eurydice, a daughter of Lysimachus (p. 56.) At a somewhat later date Ephesus fell under the dominion of the Ptolemies (B.C. 258-202), a record of which is preserved by a gold octadrachm of Berenice II (427·9 grs., Cat. Ptolemies, pl. xiii. 2), on which the bee, the symbol of Ephesus, as on the coins reading EYPYΔIKEΩN, already mentioned, indicates the place of mintage.

In addition to these regal issues, the following towns struck silver money in their own names:—

PRIENE begins to coin for the first time in the third century B.C. The standard to which the heavier coins, weighing 76 grs., belong

(pl. xxiv. 3) is doubtful. They may be either light Attic octobols, as at Ephesus (pl. x. 5) or Persic drachms as at Miletus (pl. xxi. 14). The remaining denominations follow the Phoenician or Rhodian standard.

Drachm	56 grs. (pl. xxiv. 4).
Tetrobol	34.4 „ (pl. xxiv. 5).
Triobol	26.6 „ (pl. xxiv. 6).

The great defeat of Antiochus by the Romans at the battle of Magnesia, B.C. 190, marks an epoch in the numismatic no less than in the political history of Asia Minor.

Many cities now obtained their freedom at the hands of the Romans, and began once more to strike coins, not however, as formerly, on the older Phoenician or Rhodian standards, but, as if in concert with one another, everywhere on the Attic standard. The tendency of the age in western Asia Minor was towards a community of currency. Without sufficient cohesion to enable them to adopt outright a federal coinage, the rival cities were yet so much impressed by the commercial advantages likely to accrue from a common currency, as to be forced into a sort of tacit agreement, by which the tetradrachm of the Attic standard was selected as the most widely acceptable unit of exchange. Influenced doubtless by commercial considerations, they further chose, or were compelled by circumstances to adopt, the particular coin-type, which, by long usage, had obtained, throughout the eastern world, the widest popularity on the markets. This was the head of Herakles and the eagle-bearing Zeus of the far-famed tetradrachms of Alexander the Great. These Alexandrine coins of the second century B.C. are easily distinguishable from those of the age of Alexander by their large dimensions and flat fabric, while the mint-marks of the places of issue, in the subordinate position of symbols in the field, are in themselves sufficient to brand the coins as autonomous imitations of the regal issues of a bygone age. Thus Alexander as the founder of the liberties of the Asiatic Greeks, though not perhaps solely on that account so much as for the sake of commercial expediency, was honoured by a posthumous revival of his coinage.

In addition to the revived Alexandrines, some cities also struck Attic tetradrachms with their own local types, and in some instances these local tetradrachms would appear to have been the only coins issued, a fact which tends to prove that local patriotism or vanity was still too powerful to permit of the final suppression of the autonomous coinage to which the Asiatic cities had for so many ages been accustomed.

The following are the Ionian mints in the period now under consideration :—

In the year B.C. 133 the Roman people succeeded to the inheritance of Attalus III of Pergamum, and Western Asia Minor was constituted a Roman province under the name of Asia.

The coinage of Ionia in this period consisted almost exclusively of cistophori of Ephesus, dated from the era of the province of Asia (B.C. 133). The following issues are exceptional:—

EPHESUS.

Δ coins of Attic weight with Ephesian types, probably struck during the few years of the revolt under Mithradates B.C. 87-84 (Head, Coinage of Ephesus, pl. v. 2-6).

ERYTHRAE.

Δ coins of Attic weight ... 43·5 grs. (pl. xvi. 4).

Α coins ... 15·2 and 9·9 grs. (pl. xvi. 5, 6).

These may also be assigned to the time of the Mithradatic revolt.

CHIOS. This island does not seem to have been included in the Roman province of Asia. It was declared by Sulla a free ally of the Romans, B.C. 84. The autonomous silver coinage of Chios on the Attic standard (reduced) extends down to Imperial times (pl. xxxii. 11, 12, and pl. xxxiii. 1).

In the following pages is appended in a tabular form a general conspectus of the Ionian electrum, silver, and gold coinage from the seventh to the first century B.C. Only the principal denominations have been set down in these tables owing to the necessity of compressing into four pages an outline of the numismatic metrology of twelve cities during a period of six centuries.

§ IV. SATRAPAL COINAGE.

The coins of Persian Satraps who struck at various cities on the west coast of Asia Minor, fall into the period between circ. B.C. 400 and B.C. 340. The actual places of mintage being for the most part doubtful, or at any rate open to dispute, it has been thought better to include all these issues in the volume of Ionia rather than to spread them over several volumes.

A strict scientific classification has in this instance, as in that of the early electrum series, been sacrificed for the sake of convenience of reference.

These Satrapal coins are figured on pl. xxxi. They are chiefly of Rhodian weight :—

Tetradrachm	...	238.228 grs. (pl. xxxi. 1-3, 5, 6).
Drachm	...	52.8 „ (pl. xxxi. 7).
Tetrobol	...	44.4 „ (pl. xxxi. 8, 10, 11).
Trihemibol	...	15.4 „ (pl. xxxi. 13).

Concerning the issues of the Persian type, king kneeling, see note on p. 323.

The stater of Pharnabazus (pl. xxxi. 5) has been assigned to Cyzicus, but as M. Six has pointed out to me, there is some evidence of its having been issued by Conon in B.C. 395 for the payment of his fleet blockaded in the port of Caunus by Pharax in 396, and delivered in the spring of 395 by Pharnabazus, who came to his aid and supplied him with money. The head of Pharnabazus was, according to M. Six, merely placed on the coin by Conon as a mark of respect and gratitude. The chief objection to this theory is, in my opinion, the presence of the Tunny, the well-known symbol of Cyzicus, which it seems hard to believe was likewise the symbol of Caunus.

M. Six also disputes the attribution to Lampsacus of the coins of Orontas and Spithridates (pl. xxxi. 8, 9, 11, 12), preferring to assign them to Adramyteum and the neighbouring towns Iolla and Thebe.

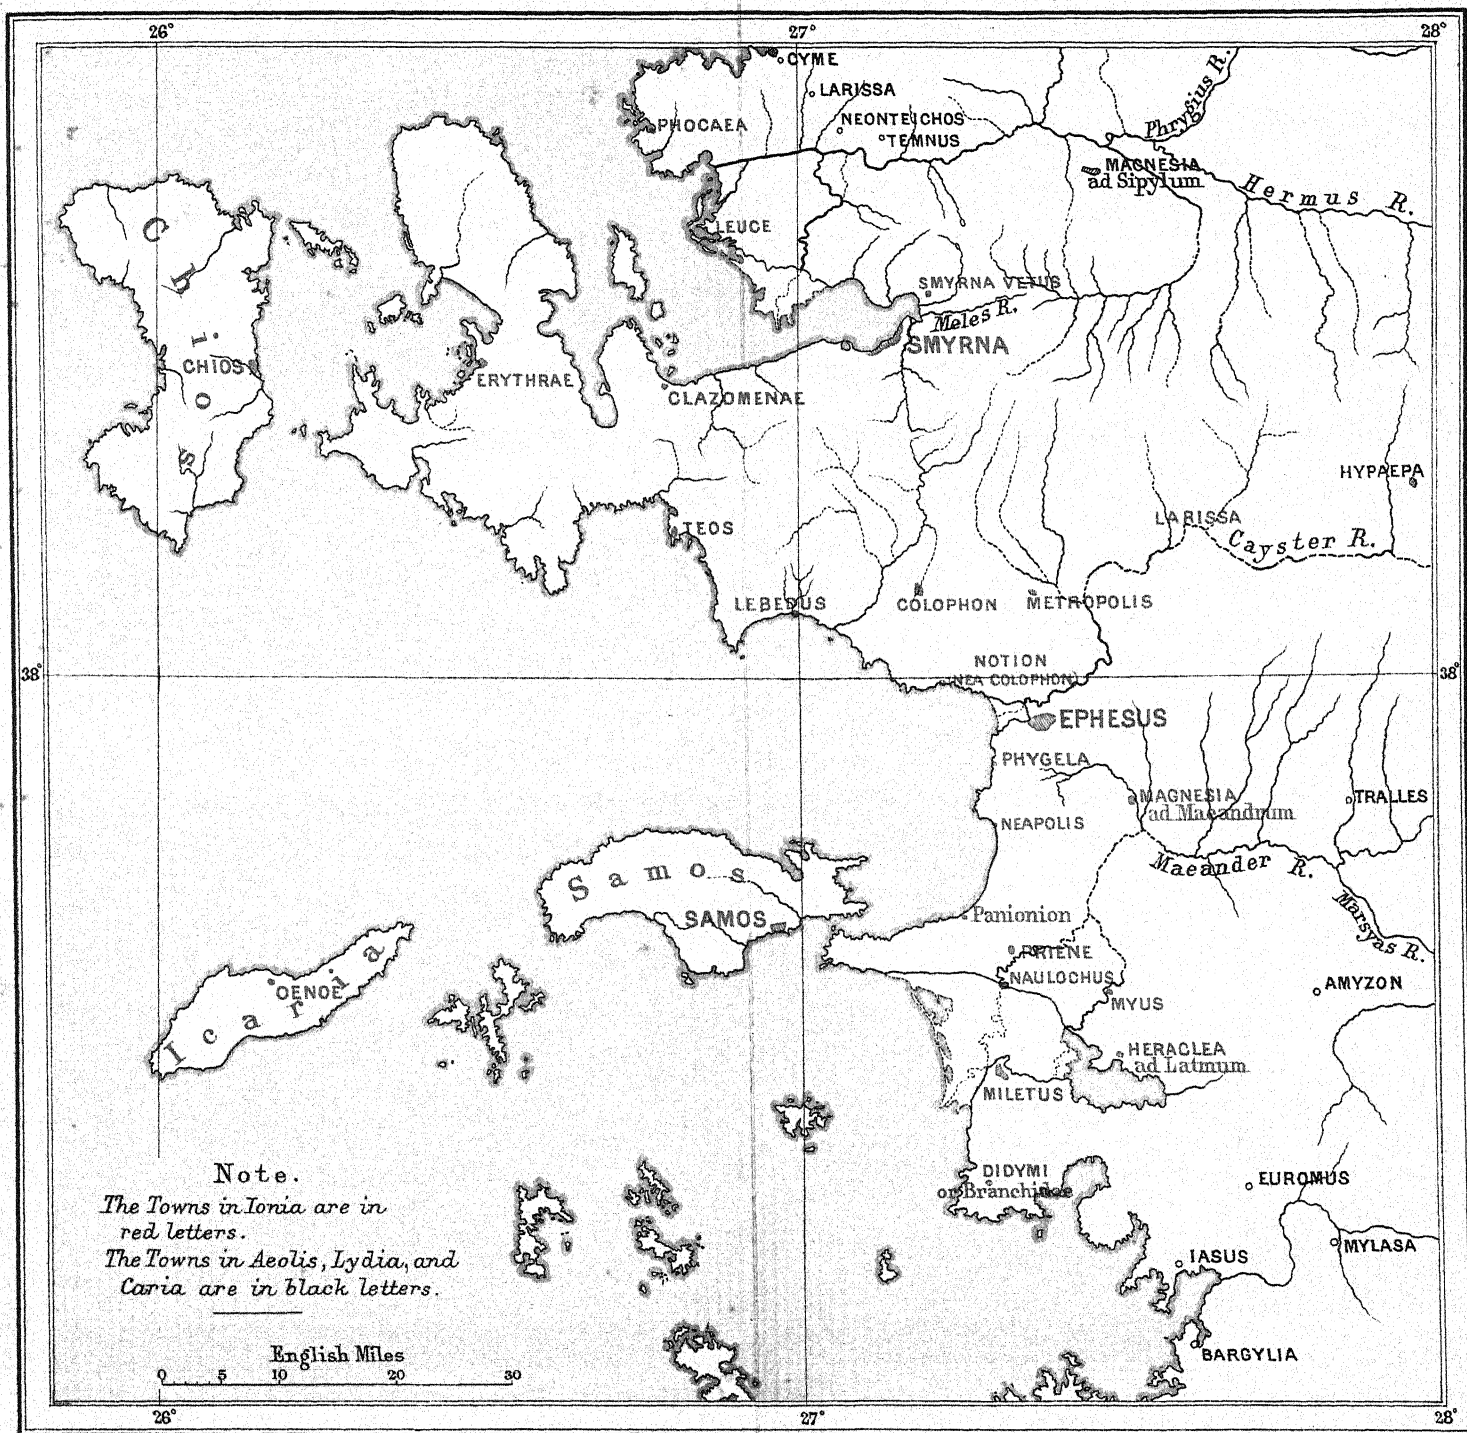

§ V. IMPERIAL COINAGE.

The coinage of the towns of Ionia under the Roman rule is a Imperial Coinage. subject which I do not propose to discuss in the Introduction to the present volume, for it is one which cannot be satisfactorily dealt with apart from that of the rest of the Roman province of Asia. The types, whether mythological, historical, or relating to the games and public festivals, are often of considerable interest; and the inscriptions, which record the titles of the cities, the names of the local games, and the official status of the eponymous magistrates of the several cities of the province, together with the changes of administration which supervened from time to time, all deserve to be dealt with in a separate treatise, which can hardly be compiled with accuracy before the whole of the coinage of Roman Asia has been completely catalogued.

In the meantime, students of the imperial series of Asia Minor may be referred in the first place to Eckhel's Doctrina, to Lenormant's Monnaie dans l'Antiquité, Tome III., and to my Historia Numorum, as well as to the following works, among others, Marquardt and Mommsen, Handbuch der römischen Alterthümer, Band iv., Römische Staatsverwaltung, Leipzig, 1881; Waddington's Asie Mineure, Paris, 1853, Mélanges de Numismatique (2 parts), Paris, 1861-67, and his Fastes des provinces asiatiques, Paris, 1872; Monceaux, De Communi Asiae Provinciae, Paris, 1885; Guiraud, Les assemblées provinciales dans l'empire romain, Paris, 1887; Buechner, De Neocoria, Giessen, 1888; and Ramsay, Historical Geography of Asia Minor, London, 1890.

The above staters seem to be nearly contemporary, but whether they belong to the mints above suggested, or were all struck at the same mint, is a doubtful point. Dr. J. P. Six is of opinion that all these staters were struck at Chios during the 5th century (Num. Chron. 1890, 219), but his arguments are hardly convincing. For earlier staters of the same standard, see Pl. I. 1, and Pl. III. 4, 5, 8 (Ephesus, Miletus); also Num. Chron. 1875, Pl. VII. 2, 3, 7 (Sardes and Dardanus).

* The Ionian κοινόν consisted originally of the following 12 cities Glazomenae, Colophon, Ephesus, Erythrae, Lebedus, Miletus, Myus, Phocaea, Priene, Teos, Chios and Samos. About B.C. 700 Smyrna, which had previously been an Aeolic city, was seized by some Ionians, and the number of the Ionian cities thus raised to 13. The κοινόν held its meetings originally at the Panionion on the northern slope of Mt. Mycale in the territory of Priene. Here stood a temple of Poseidon and a sacred grove. The various cities on the occasions of the Panionia would send contingents to this spot. Under the Empire, games called Panionia or Panionia Pythia were held perhaps elsewhere, e.g. at Colophon? (Hist. Num. 494), Ephesus (ib. 498), Miletus (ib. 505), Smyrna (ib. 510). The coins struck for the Festival under Antoninus Pius and M. Aurelius bear no city name. They were struck under the supervision of M. Cl. Fronto, Asiarch and Archiereus of the thirteen cities. In addition to the two types described above, three others are known, viz., Ant. Pius R^y Herakles giving his hand to Iolaos (Bibliothèque Nationale Paris); M. Aurelius Caesar, R^y Temple of Artemis Ephesia (Milan); M. Aurelius Caesar, R^y Tyche standing (Paris, Mion. iii. p. 62, no. 5). The word variously abbreviated ΠΡΟ, ΠΡΟΝ, or ΠΡΟΝΟ, stands for προνοθέντος, προνοήσαντος, προνοησαμένου or προνοία (cf. Dittenberger, Syllog. Inscr. Gr. 238, 267, and Boeckh, C.I.G. 2639, 2930 B, 3408, 4591), and not for προνομία [privilegio]. The letter Μ which sometimes follows ΠΡΟ and ΠΡΟΝΟ, belongs to the name of the Asiarch Μ·ΚΛ· ΦΡΟΝΤΩΝΟC, 'Ἀσιάρχου καὶ Ἀρχιερέως τῶν πόλεων. The κοινὸν Ἰώνων must not be confounded with the κοινὸν Ἀσίας. (See Monceaux, De Communi Asiae Provinciae, Paris, 1885, p. 94.)

* Sestini (Lett. di cont. viii. 57), reads this inscr. ΝΕΩ[κορων] ΕΦΕ [σίων] ΔΗ[μήτριος] ΕΠ[ιμελητής] ΕΧΑΡΑ[ξέ]. Dumersan, Cat. Allier, p. 84, accepts Sestini's reading with the substitution of ΟΜΟ[νοια] for ΝΕΩ. Both explanations are certainly wrong. I would suggest Ο[ΝΕ]Ω[κόρος] ΕΦΕ[σίων] ΔΗ[μος] ΕΠΕΧΑΡ[άξατο]. The meaning is that the people of Ephesus caused to be engraved upon their coin a group of a trophy and captive in commemoration of Trajan's conquest of Parthia, of. a contemporary coin of Tripolis in Phrygia bearing the inscription ΘΕΟΔΩΡΟC Β ΕΧΑΡΑ[ξατο] ΤΡΙΠΟΛ[ιτων], on the reverse of which is the Emperor standing before a trophy, at the foot of which sits a captive Parthian. In each case the words ἐπεχαράξατο and ἐχαράξατο seem to refer to the subject engraved upon the coin, in the one case by order of the Δῆμος, in the other by the authority of the magistrate. The verb ἐπιχαράσσειν applied to coin-types occurs in Plutarch, Poplic. 11, καὶ τῶν νομισμάτων τοῖς παλαιοτάτοις βούν ἐπεχάραττον ἢ πρόβατον ἢ σὺν.

The group of Parthia and the Trophy may be compared with the Roman gold coins of Trajan, reading PARTHIA CAPTA (Cohen., 2nd ed., ii., p. 38, no. 184).

The title Νεωκόρος occurs for the first time at Ephesus on a coin of Nero struck under the Proconsulship of M'Acilius Aviola, A.D. 65-6 (Waddington, Fastes, no. 93). The city became δῖς νεωκόρος in the reign of Hadrian, and τρίς νεωκόρος in the reign of Sept. Severus.

With regard to the fourth Neocory of Ephesus, it seems certain that it does not refer to the cultus of the Emperors, but to that of the local Artemis. (Buechner, de Neocoria, p. 79).

[Pl. XIII. 10.]

This coin is apparently the same as that published by Vaillant (Num. Gr., p. 291) with the inscription ΑΠΟΛΛΩΝ ΕΜΒΑCΙΟC ΕΦΕCΙΩΝ. He has mistaken the chlamys which hangs in a straight line from Apollo's elbow for a column upon which he rests, the bows held by the two divinities for darts, and the epithet ΙΚΕCΙΟC for ΕΜΒΑCΙΟC. The laurel-branch, ικετηρία, he has not seen at all. Probably the specimen described by him was in very poor preservation, see B. V. Head, Num. Chron., 1889, p. 236.

* See infra, nos. 266-268, where the name of Hieronymos occurs in conjunction with that of the Proconsul Petronius, A.D. 29-35. On the above coins, nos. 120-129, Sosander is the Strategos, while Hieronymos again is without a title. It seems probable, however, that he was the eponymous magistrate of the city, and, if so, the omitted title may be that of Στεφανηφόρος; cf. C. I. G. no. 3137, and Philostratus Vit. Soph. ii. 26, 2, who, speaking of the Sophist Herakleides, says that he settled at Smyrna, καὶ τὴν στεφανηφόρον ἀρχὴν παρ' αὐτοῖς ἤρξεν ἀφ' ὧν τοῖς ἐνιαυτοῖς τίθενται Σμυρναῖοι τὰ δνόματα. From the time of the Antonines onwards the eponymous magistrate of Smyrna was the Στρατηγὸς ἐπὶ τῶν ὅπλων.

* Smyrna was Neocorate for the first time under Trajan. Cf. the coin described by Mionnet, Suppl. vi. 340, no. 1687, after Vaillant, and the inscription published by Dittenberger, Arch. Zeit., 1878, p. 94. 'Ο νεωκόρος Ζμυρναίων δήμος Τιβέριον Κλαύδιον 'Ρούφον, τὸν ἑαυτοῦ πολεῖτην ἐτέλει μῆσεν κ.τ.λ. which belongs, doubtless, also to Trajan's reign, if the Rufus is identical with the Strategos of that name (see no. 325, infra). A second Neocoria was granted to Smyrna by a decree of the Senate under Hadrian (C. I. G. 3148)—καὶ ὅσα ἐπετύχομεν παρὰ τοῦ κυρίου Καίσαρος 'Αδριανοῦ διὰ 'Αντωνίου Πολέμωνος, δεύτερον δογμα συνκλήτου, καθ' ὃ δις νεωκόροι γεγόναμεν, κ.τ.λ., but no mention of it occurs on coins before the time of Ant. Pius. (Mion. Suppl. vi. 343, no. 1704.) A third Neocoria was bestowed upon the city towards the close of the reign of Sept. Severus, at the same time as a like honour was conferred upon Ephesus (Waddington Fastes, p. 251). Cf. note on the Neocories of Ephesus, p. 76, supra.

* The king of Persia here represented is probably Artaxerxes II, B.C. 404—359. The attribution to the western coast of Asia Minor is very doubtful, and rests solely upon the Ionic form Πυθαγόρης and upon the weight-standard, which, however, does not exclude the possibility of the coins being Syrian or Phœnician. It should be noted that nos. 2 and 6 were acquired from Sir A. Cunningham who, no doubt, procured them in India.
